Large Businesses Among the Top 100 Federal Small Business Contractors in FY 2012

We looked at the federal government's FY 2012 procurement data and found that, of the top 100 companies receiving the highest dollar amount in federal small business contracts, 71 were large companies that exceeded the SBA's small business size standards, 2 were anomalous and 27 were legitimate small businesses.

Large corporations that received federal small business contracts in FY 2012 include: Lockheed Martin, General Dynamics, Boeing, General Electric, Apple, Verizon, Bank of America, Coca-Cola, Comcast, Intel, Walt Disney and many more.

The data for FY 2012 shows a slight decrease in the number of large businesses on the top 100 list, down from 72 large businesses and four anomalies. However, the total still remains higher than the 2008-2010 numbers, which hovered around 60 large businesses in the top 100.

Method:

Many companies receive contracts as both large and small businesses. If a company received small business contracts in violation of the SBA's size standards, it was included in our list. Anomalous entries are highlighted in red and accompanied with an explanation.

Statistics from the research:

- 71 of the top 100 are large firms with two firms as anomalies = 73%
- Dollar total of the top 100 = $16,974,028,155.00
- Dollar total of 71 large firms and two anomaly firms = $9,488,835,049.00
- Percent of dollar total to large firms = 55.9%

Conclusion:

This most recent report from the ASBL shows that once again, large companies are the fraudulent recipients of a large portion of federal small business contracts. This practice is disastrous to our economy and hurting the American people. The ASBL urges leaders to enforce renewed oversight and monitoring of federal small business programs.
